

Congratulations!

You're the lucky recipient of the best present ever: A whole year full of books! Someone special thought you'd love this eclectic collection of top-notch fiction and nonfiction, a dozen terrific books delivered directly to your door. Whether your box of literary goodies has already arrived or is still en route, here are just a few clues about each title. (You can read full reviews of these books at basbleu.com.)

January: A family saga, history lesson, elegy, and mystery all rolled into one single, breathtaking novel.

February: This charming memoir of an indomitable female rancher exudes poise, a warm heart, and a profound reverence for nature.

March: A mid-century novel about a naïve, impoverished young Englishwoman, rendered with equal doses of humor and poignancy.

April: An exciting, female-driven spy novel that tracks a CIA spy through 1960s Argentina.

May: An immersive historical novel that shifts between the centuries, an intricate story of female ambition and sacrifice.

June: The amusingly delightful true tale of a British journalist who moves into an old plantation house and grapples with quintessential American paradoxes.

July: A poignant family drama about sisterhood, the complex bonds of love, and the power of forgiveness.

August: The true story of female aviators in the 1920s who bucked the conventions of the time.

September: A captivating, fictionalized account of the complex relationship between a beloved real-life children's author and her daughter.

October: An elegant, suspenseful French crime novel full of unexpected twists, evocative descriptions, and deep insight into human nature.

November: A uniquely beautiful novel about a real-life, boldly unconventional seventeenth-century English duchess.

December: A British whodunit about a detective investigating a mysterious death after a Christmas concert in 1920s Cambridge.

Happy reading!
