You can read full reviews of each title at basbleu.com.)

January: A special Bas Bleu bind-up of two delightfully amusing novels about two women jockeying for social dominance in 1920s England.

February: A true story heralding the extraordinary bravery of female operatives in Churchill's secret Special Operations Executive during World War II.

March: A historical novel about a disgraced architect who discovers the structural collapse he was imprisoned for may not have been his fault...nor an accident.

April: A captivating novel about a young woman who travels to England to investigate her late grandmother's role in the creation of one royally special dress.

May: An intense and riveting novel about a Nazi tracker hunting a criminal and an American girl investigating her father's mysterious German fiancée.

June: A dramatic novel set in 1920s Paris and Philadelphia about a disgraced young woman who assumes a new identity to recover her father's lost art collection.

July: A biography of a famous political wife, chronicling her childhood on the American frontier, her life during the Revolution, and her philanthropic legacy.

August: A feel-good novel about two women who join forces to fight for their community, forming a lovely intergenerational friendship along the way.

September: An introspective novel about a famous queen's sisters, the complexity of family ties, and female power in a man's world.

October: A spine-tingling novel about a young couple who move to the country for a fresh start, only to find themselves entangled in a ghostly mystery.

November: An elegant, heartwarming novel of trust and resilience, about a lost little girl and the aging, gallant former soldier who guides her home.

December: A humorous and thoughtful novel about one woman's struggle to remain significant in a world that equates age with insignificance.

Happy reading!
