You can read full reviews of each title at basbleu.com.)

January: A captivating, immersive historical novel about a female journalist who fights the Nazis as a leader of the French Resistance.

February: A suspenseful and sensual French novel of intrigue, desire, and deceit, centered around the "secret" teenage daughter of a well-known politician.

March: A fictional take on the life of writer Bram Stoker, a stunningly evocative tale of deception, ambition, and heartbreak in Victorian-era London.

April: The heartwarming story of three friends whose lifelong devotion to each other is put to the test in the early days of World War II.

May: This novel of love and self-discovery follows a cranky octogenarian from Scotland to Antarctica on an extraordinary adventure.

June: An exploration of the lives of an heiress and her daughter (based loosely on Peggy and Pegeen Guggenheim) living on an artists' colony in 1930s Mexico.

July: An introspective, humorous tale about a luxury-loving widower scheming to win back his children's affections—and their financial support.

August: An epic, award-winning family saga spanning sixty years and four generations in twentieth-century Korea and Japan.

September: A beautiful, absolutely unforgettable modern-day odyssey exploring the legacy of systemic racism and the complex bonds of family.

October: This dramatic novel thrusts readers into the tumultuous world of art and art forgeries in pre-World War II Berlin.

November: The chronicle of an unusual friendship between a solitary farmer and her donkey, a thought-provoking meditation on identity, relationships, and life itself.

December: A sparkling whodunit set in a charming French village, where the local magistrate must solve a Yuletide murder.

Happy reading!
